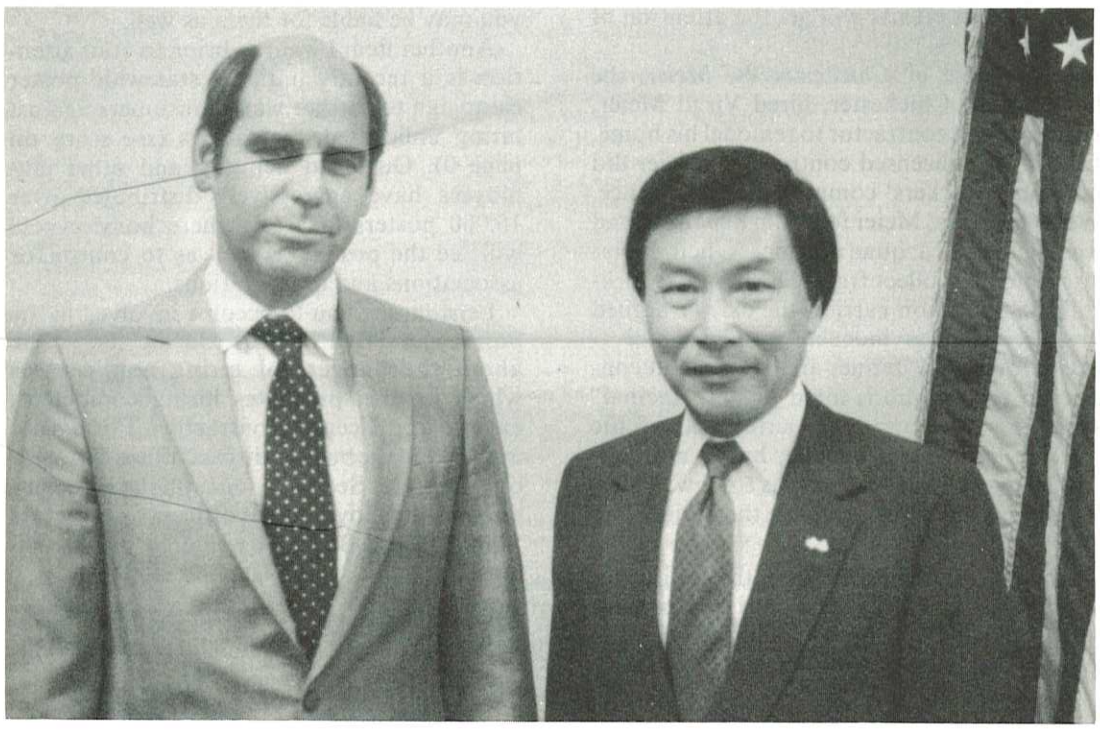
SUMMER 1986

Newly Elected Chairperson and Vice-Chairperson for CSLB



At its July meeting, the Contractors State License Board unanimously elected Benny Y. Yee as Chairperson and John H. Moore as Vice-Chairperson for the 1986–1987 fiscal year.

Yee, the first Asian to be elected as Chairperson in the history of the board, was appointed to the board in 1982 and recently reappointed to a second term by Governor George Deukmejian. He has served as a member of the Operations, Administration, Licensing and Enforcement Committees. Yee is a real estate broker and president of Benny Y. Yee Associates Real Estate and Development Company in San Francisco. In 1982, Yee was the director of the Time Savings Loan Association and the San Francisco Board of Realtors.

Moore, of Danville was appointed to the board this year. He has been president of Electro-Test Incorporated of San Ramon since 1971. From 1969–71, he was president of John H. Moore Electrical Construction of San Francisco. He is also the president of the National Testing Association and a member of the International Association of Electrical Inspectors.

ASBESTOS CERTIFICATION

If you are a contractor engaged in asbestos-related work which involves 100 square feet or more, you must pass an examination to become certified by the CSLB.

The first asbestos certification examination was administered on April 15, 1986.

Applications and study guides are available and may be requested by writing to: CSLB, P.O. Box 26000, Sacramento, CA 95826. Information and questions may be directed to (916) 366-5153.

Contractors removing asbestos must also contact CAL-OSHA and follow certain safety procedures.

PROPER SIGNATURES REQUIRED

All documents such as applications for renewing a license or additional license classes or name and address changes, etc., are required to be signed by the contractor or other personnel listed on the official records of the CSLB.

If documents such as those listed above are signed by someone other than the personnel listed on the license, the document will not be accepted by the board and will be returned to the contractor for proper signature. Avoid delays by ensuring that documents are signed by the appropriate personnel.

ASBESTOS REMOVAL CASE

Two persons in Connecticut recently received prison sentences and fines for demolishing a building without adhering to asbestos removal standards.

Maurice Fabiani, owner of the Old Pin Ship in Oakville, Connecticut, pled guilty to demolition of his building before removing asbestos and was sentenced to one year in prison. All but 30 days of the sentence was suspended.

Peter Vileisis, Jr., the owner of the wrecking company that actually demolished the building, received a one-year suspended sentence for the same violation. Both men also received $25,000 fines, were placed on probation for five years, and must perform 1,000 hours of community service. Judge T. F. Gilroy Daly of the U.S. District Court for the District of Connecticut imposed the sentences on December 19, 1985.

The two standards, which EPA issued in 1984, are part of the hazardous air pollutant regulations under the Clean Air Act. The case is also a good example of what can be accomplished through intra-agency cooperation and coordination between program offices.

Supreme Court Rules on Nonlicensees

The unlicensed contractor is of great concern to this board for many reasons. Unfortunately, many of those reasons have little impact on the public if they feel they can save money by hiring unlicensed contractors. However, a case decided by the California Supreme Court graphically drives home the point that in addition to shoddy workmanship, the public is also exposing itself to serious liability when they hire unlicensed contractors. I want to bring this case to your attention because it deserves wide dissemination to every "consumer" group and person we can reach. Through this column and through your help, I hope to ensure that our industry is aware of this case and its ramifications and I hope that together, our efforts will get the attention of the public.

In the case of Chichester vs. Meier, the homeowner, Chichester, hired Virgil Meier, an unlicensed contractor to remodel his home. Like most unlicensed contractors, Meier did not carry workers' compensation insurance. While working, Meier fell from a scaffold and was rendered a quadriplegic. When Meier attempted to collect from Chichester's workers' compensation carrier, the carrier argued that Meier was an independent contractor.

California law defines an independent contractor as one who is hired by a "Principal" such as a homeowner to perform a specific job, i.e., remodel a kitchen, but is not controlled (by the homeowner) as to how he performs his work to accomplish the remodeling job.

However, in the Meier case, the California Supreme Court ruled that if one is performing work for which a contractor's license is required, that person would be classified as an employee rather than an independent contractor unless that person was licensed. Thus, this ruling makes Meier eligible for workers' compensation benefits.

Another case with a somewhat similar scenario is just working its way through the judicial process. But, instead of going after compensation benefits, the plaintiff filed a liability action. That case, depending on its outcome, could really have an interesting impact on the public.

Therefore, if you hire an unlicensed contractor to perform work for which a license is required, you may be liable as if he or she were your employee rather than an independent contractor. If the contractor has employees, you may be liable for them as well.

Another item I want to bring to your attention is a recently initiated statewide poster campaign to further warn consumers against hiring unlicensed contractors (see story on page 0). Our field deputies and other employees have aggressively distributed over 15,000 posters in areas where homeowners will see the posters as well as to contractor associations and organizations.

I encourage you to become involved in the poster campaign to help educate the public about the dangers of hiring nonlicensees which in turn promotes hiring competent, experienced, licensed contractors. Posters are available at the board's district offices throughout the state. See your local phone directory under State Government offices, Contractors State License Board. I welcome your participation.

GTE MODIFIES ITS OFFER TO HELP CURB NONLICENSEE ADS

The Spring issue of the newsletter reported that the CSLB had solicited the cooperation of GTE to help curb nonlicensed contractor advertising and GTE had instructed its sales staff not to accept any advertisements unless the contractor provided a contractors license or inserted a disclosure in the ad that he/she was not licensed. Unfortunately, GTE modified its offer shortly after publication of the newsletter. GTE will now request contractors' license numbers from advertisers and print a disclosure of information relative to state law requirements concerning contractors on each page of the directories under the appropriate headings. Although this modification is not as effective as the original offer, the CSLB hopes that GTE's efforts coupled with the CSLB's programs to inform the public and work with other governmental enforcement bodies, will begin to close the loopholes.

Legislative Update

by Shelby Cecchettini
Legislative Liaison

Many bills affecting licensed (and unlicensed) California contractors were introduced during the 1985/86 session. A description of major pieces of legislation, as of June 27, 1986, follows. Questions regarding these bills may be directed to Ms. Cecchettini at (916) 366-5267.

Assemblyman Dave Elder carried AB 1795 for the CSLB. He had originally introduced the bill for another organization who decided not to go forward with it. When the board took over the bill (1-3-86) we included provisions to allow us to require a disciplinary bond after a suspension or revocation has been ordered, whether or not the disciplinary action is stayed. This bill was prompted when an appellate court found that the board does not have the authority to impose the disciplinary bond when an action is stayed.

Late in the process, the bill was amended to lower the minimum amount of the disciplinary bond from three times the contractor's bond to $15,000. This will affect swimming pool contractors (C-53), whose license bond is $10,000, and must post the disciplinary bond. The Governor signed AB 1795 on May 5, 1986, and its provisions become effective January 1, 1987.

AB 2421 by Assemblyman Jerry Eaves, a CSLB-sponsored bill was signed by the Governor (Chapter 27, Statutes of 1986) and becomes effective January 1, 1987. The board included several provisions, including authority for the registrar to accept license bonds within 90 days after the effective date shown on the bond. Beyond that date proof must be provided that the bond was issued and in effect during the time period covered and that the failure to file the bond was due to circumstances beyond the control of the licensee.

Assemblyman Richard Mountjoy is carrying AB 2993 for the Association of Builders and Contractors. This bill would require the CSLB to impose an additional bond on applicants/licensees who refuse or fail to pay a consumer, employee, contractor or subcontractor based on a recorded and unsatisfied judgment from a court of law or unsatisfied arbitration award in the past five years. The bond amount would be five times the judgment amount, not to exceed $50,000.

The Franchise Tax Board is sponsoring AB 3060, which is carried by Assemblyman Tom Hannigan. This bill would require every board, as defined under the Business and Professions Code, including the State Bar and the Department of Real Estate, to require applicants and licensees to provide federal employer identification number or social security number at the time of application or renewal.

Applicants and licensees also would be requested to submit a declaration that to the best of his or her knowledge, any required state income tax returns have been filed and all state tax, additions to tax, penalties, and interest required to be paid have been paid or a payment agreement has been arranged with the Franchise Tax Board. It would also require every board and the Insurance Commissioner to report a failure to comply with the law to the Franchise Tax Board.

This bill also would establish, beginning July 1, 1987, to January 1, 1991, a multi-agency strikeforce to conduct audits, investigations and prosecutions of blatant tax violations and unreported cash-pay violations.

Assemblyman Gil Ferguson, concerned about the state of the board's surplus of over $20 million and the decreasing number of enforcement staff, introduced AB 4319, which would add legislative intent language to the Contractors License Law, to state that the board shall use funds appropriated from the Contractors License Fund to improve its administrative and investigative oversight activities and capacity. The Governor signed this bill June 9, 1986.

The Associated General Contractors (AGC) is sponsoring SB 1172 by Senator John Seymour which would authorize the CSLB to award grants in a total amount up to $1.5 million in grants to public or private educational institutions for the support of courses of study in construction management if the surplus in the Contractors License Fund exceeds $5 million.

The CSLB originally sponsored SB 1314 by Senator Paul Carpenter, which would provide legal assistance, in the form of representation by the State Attorney General, to persons supplying expertise to the CSLB in the evaluation of work performed by licensed contractors, if a civil action for defamation is brought against those persons for opinions or testimony given or statements made to the board.

The Attorney General recommended amendments to this bill to have the provisions apply to all boards, bureaus and commissions in the Department of Consumer Affairs which use the services of expert consultants or witnesses. The amendments were accepted into the bill.

Subsequent to Senator Joseph Montoya's Senate Business and Professions Committee interim hearings on contractors and advertising, last year, the Senator introduced the following two bills:

SB 1650 would provide that a violation of license law advertising provisions would be punishable by a fine of not less than $700 and not more than $1,000, and that the fine is in addition to any other punishment for the violation.

The bill would also authorize the CSLB to include an order to disconnect the telephone number displayed in an ad in telephone corporation's classified directory placed by an unlicensed contractor.

SB 1878 would require persons selling space for commercial advertising in alphabetical and classified directories (such as the Yellow Pages) to disclose to a purchaser of advertising space, the name of the person's employer, the name of the publisher, and the number of directories distributed in the prior edition.

Senator Montoya also is carrying SB 2333 which would establish the Profession Malpractice Liability Insurance Fund, a liability insurance program for persons licensed by bodies and boards within the Department of Consumer Affairs. The fund, administered by the Department of Consumer Affairs, would be the exclusive source of liability insurance for the department's licensees. The bill would require licensees to be insured by the fund as a condition of licensure and to pay a fee to the fund at the time of initial licensure and at renewal.

Senator John Doolittle is carrying SB 2389 to require the registrar to issue citations against unlicensed contractors and to discontinue accepting unlicensed or self-employed experience for the purpose of obtaining a license after 1-1-88. Although the experience could be submitted until 1-1-88, it could not have been gained after 12-31-86.

Building upon the model of Assemblyman Gray Davis' AB 2040, which established stricter regulation of the removal of asbestos containing materials, and an asbestos certification process for licensed contractors, Senator David Roberti introduced SB 2575. This bill, since taken over by Senator Dan McCorquodale, would provide that after 5-1-88, no contractor may engage in work to remedy or remove a hazardous substance without having passed an approved hazardous substance removal certification examination. The CSLB, in consultation with the Department of Health Services, would be required to approve initial and updated hazardous substance removal examinations.

STATEWIDE POSTER CAMPAIGN AGAINST NONLICENSED CONTRACTORS

Earlier this year, the CSLB kicked-off a statewide poster campaign using the four posters shown. The board distributed copies to the media, contractor associations, labor organizations, local building departments, and members of the California Legislature and their district offices.

The bulk of the posters are being distributed by CSLB field offices to locations with high public visibility such as post offices, public libraries, community activity centers (senior activity centers), churches and temples, lending institutions, supermarkets and convenience stores, small claims courts, building material supply stores, utility company offices, etc.

The board issued the press release that follows as a means to educate the media and the general public about the dangers of retaining unlicensed contractors and the impact that nonlicensees have on our state's economy.

The Contractors State License Board is launching a statewide poster campaign to warn consumers against retaining nonlicensed contractors. Two of the four posters that are enclosed are being distributed statewide.

Last year, the Board received nearly 30,000 consumer complaints against contractors in California. Approximately one fourth of these were against nonlicensed contractors. There are 196,000 licensed contractors in this state.

When a consumer files a valid complaint against a licensed contractor, the Board attempts to mediate the problem with both parties. If mediation is unsuccessful, the Board takes additional steps which could lead to a legal action against the contractor that could involve restitution, a fine and possibly license suspension or revocation.

On the other hand, a consumer complaint against an unlicensed contractor, if he/she can be found, usually results in a citation against the nonlicensee, but the Board cannot order the nonlicensee to correct the work because he/she is not licensed.

Because state law requires a licensed contractor for work costing $200 or more, it behooves the consumer to hire a licensed contractor.

The nonlicensee contractor community continuous to survive because consumers believe that nonlicensed contractors will give them a better deal. The board has found that unlicensed contractors consistently submit the lowest bids on projects. The reasons for this are noncompliance with state and federal tax requirements and their failure to contribute to employee benefit programs, such as disability and unemployment programs. However, because the homeowner is typically more interested in getting his/her project completed as inexpensively as possible, the "technicalities" of state license and tax requirements become less important. Until something goes wrong, of course, then the homeowner wants to know how the state can allow something like this to happen. But, the public is not alone in becoming the victim of unlicensed contractors. The state's economy suffers too, as the Little Hoover Commission documented in its study of the underground economy.

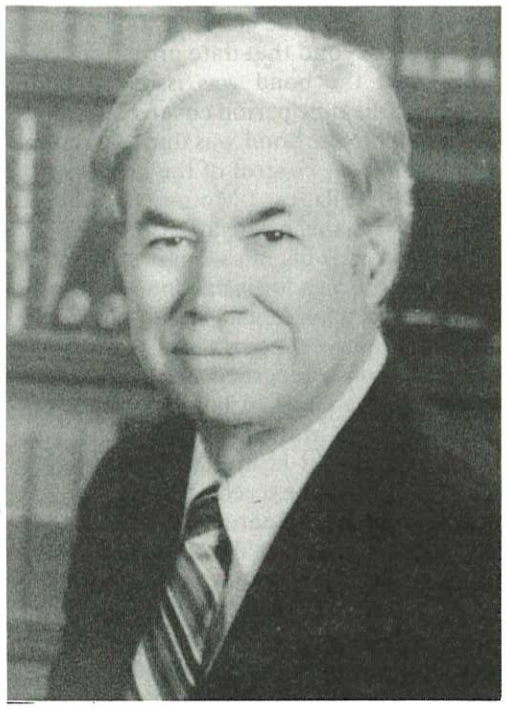
Participants in the underground economy receive or pay cash for work without withholding proper income, payroll or sales taxes, and without filing the appropriate reports to the various taxing agencies.

Experts estimate that California is losing more than $2 billion in income taxes alone each year. But the effect doesn't stop there. Participants in the underground economy also fraudulently file for welfare benefits and rely on Medi-Cal programs for health care. As a result, the cost to the state to operate these programs is increased by millions of dollars annually. So, although these people feel no compunction to contribute to unemployment insurance, disability or Social Security, they don't hesitate to claim against those funds. Where, then, is the advantage to hiring an unlicensed contractor? The low bid becomes illusory since every taxpayer ends up paying for the benefits and costs that the unlicensed contractor doesn't.

The Contractors Board is educating the public through free seminars, cooperating with their local state and federal government agencies, and through this poster campaign. But, the responsibility also lies on the shoulders of the public. The unlicensed contractor community will continue to survive as long as consumers hire them.

SENATOR PRESLEY HOSTS OPERATION OUTREACH SEMINARS

Senator Robert Presley hosted Operation Outreach seminars in Palm Desert and in San Bernardino. The seminars drew over one hundred constituents who listened attentively to CSLB's Southern Regional Deputy Registrar David Phillips and Consumer Services Representative Connie Gontang. Both CSLB representatives offered consumer tips on contracting for home improvement services and warnings against hiring unlicensed contractors. All participants received a copy of the board's main consumer brochure "Blueprint for Building Quality."



Senator Robert Presley

Unlicensed contractors are too expensive.

If you don't believe it wait till something goes wrong and try to collect.

If unlicensed contractors say they will do a good job – all you have is their word on it. Period.

Licensed contractors, on the other hand, are regulated by law.

So don't gamble your savings on an unlicensed contractor, and don't start any project until you've read the booklet, "Blueprint For Building Quality." It's yours for the asking.

Fighting unscrupulous contractors

Two new laws help owners with contracts and in the courts

January 7, 1986
Fremont Argus

By Kim Favors
Business writer

Disgruntled homeowners have two new state laws on their side in the fight against unscrupulous contractors.

One law, Senate Bill 486, lets consumers sue unlicensed contractors for triple damages, to $10,000 total, and collect attorney costs and court fees if they win.

The other, Assembly Bill 741, requires a contractor to wait until financing is approved before starting on a home improvement project in which the contract is contingent upon the client obtaining a loan.

The laws, which took effect Jan. 1, have received mixed reviews from consumer advocates and the building trade.

"The bills sort of even things up," said Ken McEldowney, director of Consumer Action, a nonprofit group based in San Francisco.

"The first gives consumers a little bit of clout against unlicensed contractors.

"The second is a protection against fast-talking contractors" who themselves arrange costly home improvement loans for low-income families and then file liens when the homeowners default on the payments, McEldowney said.

Judges weren't likely to throw the book at a guy just for trying to make a living for his family.

There are an estimated 400,000 building contractors in the state. About 200,000 of them are licensed.

Before passage of SB 486, consumers with complaints against non-licensed contractors "were practically doomed," said Shelby Cecchettini, legislative liaison with the Contractors State License Board.

An unlicensed contractor who abandoned a project or did a shabby job was rarely held accountable.

The state hasn't been much help, she said, because it can't pull licenses contractors don't have. Complaints didn't get far with attorneys because they feared low-income homeowners—most often the victims of unscrupulous contractors—couldn't pay their fees.

When complaints did make it to court, "judges weren't likely to throw the book at a guy just for trying to make a living for his family . . . and attorneys didn't want to look stupid," Cecchettini said.

Many attorneys have since inquired about the new law, which also applies to cosmetologists, architects, engineers, auto mechanics and other professionals who must be licensed by the state, said Cecchettini.

"It's an interesting situation," she mused. "The reality is people are still going to use unlicensed contractors" because they submit lower bids.

But, "if the word gets out that attorneys are going to start taking more and more of these cases, then anything that works as a warning is good."

Dan Collin, a lobbyist for the California Building Industry Association, has no quarrel with SB 486, sponsored by Sen. Ed Davis, R-Los Angeles.

"Anybody who wants to hurt unlicensed contractors isn't going to bother us, since they're unfair competition to what my guys do." CBIA represents about 5,000 licensed general contractors statewide.

But Collin was skeptical that consumers could recoup their losses from the types of contractors he described as "fly-by-night people".

"You can't get blood out of turnips—your cause for action is only as good as the financial health of the unlicensed person," he said.

Collin said CBIA is more concerned with AB 741, which he believes may create unnecessary delays for honest contractors and their clients. CBIA opposed the legislation, sponsored by Assemblyman Pat Johnston, D-Stockton.

Under the law, if signing a home improvement contract is contingent upon the client obtaining financing, the contractor may not perform any services until:

- The third party lender agrees to make the loan;
- The client accepts the loan;
- The client does not back out of the loan during the "cooling off" period specified by law.

The law, according to Cecchettini, was in response to problems with unscrupulous contractors who would start work immediately after telling clients completion was contingent upon the homeowners obtaining financing.

"In one case," said Cecchettini, "a contractor targeted low-income minority families, sold them siding and started work right away.

"When the owners were unable to obtain financing, the contractor arranged for it. The financing terms included high interest rates, which the owners could not afford. They defaulted on the payments and the contractor filed liens against as many as 30 homeowners."

Painter goes to pay fines but gets arrested

May 13, 1986
Modesto Bee

By WILLIAM D. KANE
Bee staff writer

An unlicensed Hughson painting contractor drove to Sacramento Monday hoping to pay a few fines and get a proper contractor's license at the same time.

Instead, Jeff Pappas, 28, was arrested on 12 business code violations, including two felonies, authorities said.

Dale Stewart, a senior investigator for the state Contractors License Board, said Pappas had made the appointment to go to Sacramento in hopes of clearing his record.

But it was too late because authorities decided last week to serve an arrest warrant, he said.

Pappas was charged with two counts on using another contractor's license number, both felonies. The violations are subject to fines up to $10,000 and one year in jail.

In addition, he was cited for 10 misdemeanors of fraudulent advertising as a licensed contractor and contracting without a license.

Stewart said Pappas had been given administrative citations last November and fined $500. He said Pappas agreed to pay the fines but never did.

Then, more complaints started coming in, Stewart said.

"A little old lady in Denair was bilked out of $400 for interior painting work that had to be redone," Stewart said.

No refund was made, he said.

A tire store with outlets in Modesto and Napa also complained of slap-dash work.

Altogether, Pappas was charged with defrauding four victims of $6,000 worth of work at five job sites.

Pappas also faces investigation of complaints by employees to the state labor commissioner's office, Stewart said.

It takes at least four years of journeyman work to qualify for a state contractor's license. In Pappas' case he could only document some two years' work, Stewart said.

CORRECTIONS:

The spring issue of the California Licensed Contractor (CLC) reported a citation issued on 12/11/85 to Howard Mescher, License number 375961.

That citation has been withdrawn. New evidence obtained in the case indicated that Mr. Mescher made the necessary corrections to the project prior to issuance of the citation.

The "CLC" also errored in reporting a citation issued to William Elliott, Continental Pools in Pleasanton.

The CSLB regrets these errors and apologizes for any problems that this error has caused.
