The Registrar's Corner

by David R. Phillips

This, the first "Registrar's Corner" since I became Registrar, gives me an opportunity to wish each of you a healthy, happy and prosperous 1991. I come to you in this column to chat about issues of mutual and current interest.

You may notice in this issue, and perhaps remember from the last two, a couple of pages of listings you haven't seen before. I am referring to the list of "Unlicensed Contractors Citations" that appears under the primary heading of "Disciplinary Action." These listings were included as a graphic demonstration of the results we have achieved in our ongoing struggle to solve the unlicensed contractor problem.

The 1982 Legislature added provisions to the Contractors State License Law that authorized the Registrar to issue citations and assess civil penalties against persons acting in the capacity, or engaging in the business of, a contractor without having a license in good standing to so engage. These laws became effective on January 1, 1983. The law has remained unchanged throughout the years, except for the amount of civil penalty to be assessed. The original version of the penalty law (Section 7028.7) was permissive, and allowed a penalty not to exceed $3,000. In 1988 the law made the civil penalties mandatory, and the amount of penalty at present is not less than $200 nor more than $4,500.

It was not until 1989 that the Legislature authorized the Contractors State License Board to create a separate "Unlicensed Activity Unit," the duties of which included rigorous enforcement of the law prohibiting unlicensed activities. The unit was created in southern California as a demonstration project only.

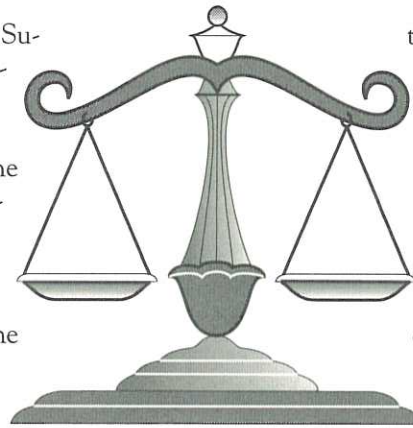

This unit has performed several "stings" and "sweeps," and has issued a very large number of citations against unlicensed contractors. I believe that these accomplishments will help to justify a comparable unit in northern California.

Our people in the Northern Region are also doing a very fine job, although it is being done without benefit of the extra personnel required to maintain such a unit. The number of unlicensed people from northern California listed, together with the article in the Fall/Winter 1990 issue entitled "A Field Day in Court for CSLB Enforcement Efforts" shows that this Board is doing a fine job in eradicating unlicensed contractor activity in the entire state.

Elsewhere in this publication is an article dealing with one of the major penalties for contracting without a license. This penalty, the inability to collect compensation for work and materials furnished, can be quite expensive. Hydrotech Systems, Inc., an out-of-state company, learned this recently after losing $110,000 on a case decided by the California Supreme Court. This article should make interesting reading.

Supreme Court Reaffirms Prohibition of Suit for Unlicensed Contractor

The California Supreme Court recently upheld the validity of Section 7031 of the Contractors License Law. The section provides that no person acting in the capacity of a contractor may collect compensation in court on a contract, unless he or she as a California Contractor Licensee.

The Fall/Winter 1990 California Licensed Contractor described the fate of three unlicensed contractors seeking to collect compensation for work performed as a contractor. The small claims court hearing the matter denied two of the contractors any collection rights, and took the third matter under advisement because of a technicality. The small claims commissioner ruled that without the proper licenses required

File Your Bond with the Registrar - Not Your File Drawer!

When you purchase a bond that is required for licensure, DO NOT hold onto it. FILE it with the Registrar of Contractors IMMEDIATELY.

Filing a bond or having a bond on file with the Registrar could mean the difference between having a valid license or having a license under suspension. Having the required bond on file could be a deciding factor in proving that a person is, or is not, duly licensed.

Section 7031 of the Contractors State License Law prevents a person from maintaining an action in court for the collection of compensation for work performed as a contractor if he or she cannot prove that he or she was a duly licensed contractor at all times during the performance of the contract.

A license cannot be issued until the Registrar receives the required bond or bonds. Licenses cannot be renewed, reinstated or reactivated unless the required bond or bonds are filed in the Sacramento headquarters office.

to perform the work, the unlicensed plaintiffs had "no standing in court." Despite a "meeting of the minds" between consumer and contractor, and even though the unlicensed contractor provided "substantial compliance" with the terms of the contract, the plaintiffs were not allowed to have their cases heard.

In Hydrotech Systems, Inc. v Oasis Water Park et al. (No. S015248, January 24, 1991), the court refused to recognize payment claims by unlicensed contractors. The majority opinion stated, "The purpose of the licensing law is to protect the public from incompetence and dishonesty in those who provide building and construction services. The licensing requirements provide minimal assurance that all persons offering such services in California have the requisite skill and character, understand applicable local laws and codes, and know the rudiments of administering contracting business."

The court continued, "Section 7031 advances this purpose by withholding judicial aid from those who seek compensation for unlicensed contract work. The obvious statutory intent is to discourage persons who have failed to comply with the licensing law from offering or providing their unlicensed services for pay."

Hydrotech Systems, Inc., a New York Corporation, entered into a contract in July 1985 with Wessman Construction Company, Inc., to design and construct a 29,000-square-foot surfing pool for $850,000. Wessman was the general contractor for Oasis Waterpark, a California Corporation, for the construction of a water-oriented amusement park in Palm Springs. The contract provided that Wessman was entitled to hold back specific portions of the contract amount pending satisfactory completion and operation of the pool. Hydrotech later brought suit against Wessman and Oasis claiming that more than $110,000 was being withheld, although the pool had long since been completed and was performing as specified. Oasis et al took exception to the suit, alleging that Hydrotech did not possess a California contractor's license.

The result of this complicated case is that Hydrotech was denied any rights to collect the more than $110,000 retained by Wessman and Oasis pursuant to the provisions of Section 7031. Since this judgment was by the California Supreme Court, only an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court could prevail.

It seems nothing in this world is either all bad or all good. There is another fact to this incident which resulted in a loss for Hydrotech and a windfall for Wessman and Oasis. Wessman, although prevailing in this case, may have committed an act which would have been a cause for disciplinary action pursuant to Section 7118. Section 7118 provides that entering into a contract with a contractor while the contractor is not licensed constitutes grounds for disciplinary action. There is no knowledge requirement in this section of law, but the facts of this instant case reveal that Wessman was very much aware of the unlicensed status of Hydrotech. Penalties for violation of Section 7118 can include civil penalty, suspension or revocation of a contractor's license.

Although not addressed in the Supreme Court decision, the provisions of Section 7031 apply to licensed contractors who undertake contracts that require a classification other than the classification held by the contractor. In other words, a contractor contracting out of classification may very well be prohibited from collecting in a court of law.

It behooves a contractor to be very certain when entering into a contract that he or she is a duly licensed contractor at all times. "Duly licensed" means, besides being licensed in the proper classification, that the license is currently renewed, proper required bonds are on file, there has been no change in address or personnel, such as a change in partnership, without proper notification to the Registrar and the qualifying person is still associated with the licensed entity.

Pocket Cards for Inactive Licenses

Contractors with inactive status will begin receiving a plastic card starting with a renewal date of July 1, 1991. The card has the same format as the one issued to contractors with active status, with two exceptions. The word "inactive" is printed at the top of the card, and the background logo will be red instead of green.

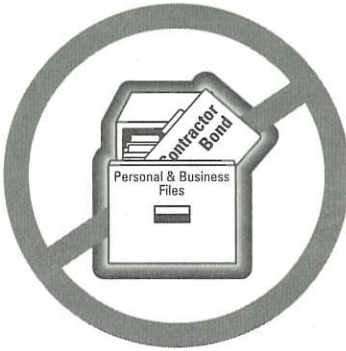

All inactive contractors will begin receiving the new plastic card at their time of renewal.

When renewing or replacing a bond, a few days can make a big difference. A bond lying on your desk or stashed in your desk drawer is just about the same as having no bond. Get it in the mail to the Registrar immediately.

Bonding companies specializing in contractor's bonds generally are aware that original copies of the contractor's bonds must be filed with the Registrar.

Other professionals may not be. They may tell you to put your original bond put away for safe keeping. Don't do it. Send it immediately to the Registrar.

The Registrar is authorized to accept a bond for filing. He can retroactively remove a bond suspension, or reinstate a license from the date of issuance of the bond, only if he receives the bond within 90 days from the date it is issued. Otherwise a license will be suspended until the bond is received.

Treat the bond as you would a hot potato. Get it out of your hands immediately. Then you won't get burned.
